Chapter 1 by Reagan Henderson

I sat in bed with Mama beside me. I yawned as she kissed my forehead good night. "Night mom," I said and fell asleep. "Good night Aubrey," Mama said and shut off the lights and closed the door and left. I soon drifted asleep.

The next morning I woke up to the smell of bacon and eggs. I got up out of my bed and stretched. I got clothes from my dresser and got dressed. I put on a black shirt with a blue soul catcher symbol on it. I put on blue jeans that had holes in the them. I put on my black sweatshirt and black baseball cap. I put on my black and blue Nike shoes. As soon as I tied the last shoe my Grandma called up to me.

"Aubrey! Breakfasts ready!," Grandma yelled from the bottom of the stairs. I yelled back, "Coming!" I ran down the stairs and sat down at the counter and waited for my bacon and eggs sandwich. Grandma set my sandwich down in front of me and asked, "Do you wanna hear a story?" I picked the crust off of my sandwich and said, "Sure, Grandma," Grandma sat down across from me and said, "Now, this is the story of the Soul Catchers." I looked up from my plate and stared at her. "Soul Catchers? Like, the people who have the blue soul catcher symbol on souls were fragments of people, so the group continued to capture souls. But by 2056 one group shut them down but they rised back up. So, do this day, 2075, they continue to capture souls. And I fear that when I die, I will be captured also. And, if you ever die, try to stay clear of them as possible, alive or not." As Grandma finished, I nodded, not saying a word.

"I'm going out Grandma, Ok?" I said. "Ok Aubrey, be safe, remember stay clear of soul catchers." Grandma said. I said, "I will Grandma." And I walked out the door into the rain.

I walked around the town until I walked into an alley way, which I saw, a man, standing there. I squinted to get a better look. But that didn't matter 'cause when that failed I said, "Who are you?" But instead of answering my question, the man said, "Who Are YOU?" I answered, "I'm Aubrey, what's your name?" The man finally answered and said, "I'm Kai, I work for a company, but I hate it there." I asked, "What company do you work for?" He answered with a solid answer, "I work for the Soul Catchers." And after he said that he gave a sly grin.

"Y-you work for the Soul Catchers? My Grandma said to stay away from you guys." I said shaking my head. "Well, your Grandma is wrong, we would never torture a human being, let alone a 16 year old girl." Kai said, giving me a stare and a grin I can never forget. Kai walked a few steps forward, getting closer to me. "Don't come close to me!" I yelled. Kai stopped and gave his sly grin. "Why not? Your a girl in the middle of an alley way talking to a stranger," Kai said.

Kai gave one last grin and after that I heard foot steps behind me. I turned around and saw a taller man standing behind me with a bag in his hands. He also gave a sly grin. He lifted the bag and I backed away. But Kai had his arms around me, holding me still. "No! Let me go! I Refuse!" And with those words, I kicked the man in front of me in shin and kicked behind me, hitting Kai in the leg. The man had fallen in front of me moaning in pain. I turned around to see Kai still standing there. I was shocked to still see him standing there as the man was moaning in pain.

"Trying to get out? Ain't gonna work." Said Kai standing in front of my testing tube. "Let me out!" I demanded. "Heh, never gonna happen sweety," He said and pulled a lever.

I looked up and saw the testing tube filling up with purple gas. "Knock-out gas, You're gonna sleep for a long time Aubrey." Kai said and after that everything went black as my eyes slowly closed.

I thought, This is the end.
